Christian Credo

Lesson for February 24, 1963

The word "Credo" comes from the Latin and it means "I believe." Most Christian churches repeat the "Creed" during the Sunday worship. But a person might know the Creed by heart and still not really believe it. Some Christians fly on the wings of others, so to speak. They expect to "go to heaven on their grandmother's ticket." They expect to get credit for what Grandmother believed. It can't be done. Some others have to creed but the Bible. They feel that nobody understands a creed anyhow, and that creeds are the language of men not of God. As a matter of fact, all Christian creeds are based on the Bible and it is a striking fact that they are all much alike, and often in the exact words of the Bible. If a man believes just one single thing, he has that much of a creed.

Believing What We Cannot See

Let us look at another word: Science. That comes from another Latin word, meaning "I know." What is the difference between a Credo and science? What is the difference between a Creed and knowledge? One difference is this: If I say "I know" something, and I do know it, then I can prove it to anybody who is not blind or crazy. But if I say "I believe" something, I can be just as sure about it as if I "knew" it, and it can be just as true. Only, what I believe is not public knowledge shared by everybody. It is private and personal. It goes beyond what any fool can plainly see.

The most important truths in life are precisely those that cannot be proved, but must be believed. When a girl promises to love and to cherish a young man, how does he, how does any one know she is telling the truth? It is the most important thing in his life; but he must live by it, not prove it. We believe that God is love; but not every one knows that though everybody knows the sky is blue. You can know that God is love not by having some one prove it to you; you have to live by faith that it is true.

The First Christian Creed

The first Christian creed was probably the shortest. Jesus asked His closest friends: Who do men say that I am? Peter's answer is reported by Mark as a very short one: You are the Christ! With that single sentence Peter registered his belief about Jesus and his belief in Jesus. From that day to this, Christ has held the central place. There may be all kinds of churches, but one kind you will never see is one where the people won't say whether they believe in Christ or not. Any "Christian" who hasn't made up his mind about Jesus is hardly ready to be called a Christian.

Mind you, Peter did not say all the things, he did not use all the words, about Jesus that the church would one day use. But in that simple declaration, You are the Christ, was packed something vitally important. For one thing, Peter places Jesus in a class by Himself. No Jew in those days thought there could be more than one Christ (or Messiah — the two titles mean the same). Further, Peter meant to say that Jesus was the Number One Authority ever men. To be Christ means to share the sovereignty of God Himself. How could Peter know this was true? he never tried to prove it, but he dared to live by it.

Call to All, Call for All

There is a very important feature of Christian faith, as its center and heart. That is, genuine Christian faith is much more than reciting a list of what you believe. More important than believe-about is belief-in. There is a poem called "Not What but Whom I do Believe;" it speaks for Christians everywhere, it declares faith in a Person not in a Proposition.

There are millions of things one can know or believe, without being changed at all. A man who believes oatmeal is good for him is just about the same man if he changes his mind and concludes that oatmeal is bad for him. But if a man believes that God is good, if he goes on and is not changed by that belief, he doesn't really believe it. Christian belief challenges all men calls to all; and true Christian belief calls on a man for all that is within him.

Pastor Says

"DOES IT EMBARRASS YOU TO TALK ABOUT GOD?"

Listening on a train, bus, plane or the discussion in a barber shop, one can hear almost anything under the sun — politics, bargain buys, outer space, sexology, child psychology, domestic difficulties — name it and you will hear it discussed. People have no hesitancy at all to discuss these matters, but let somebody inject the moral and spiritual, the Christian religion, and pretty soon everybody has something else that needs attention. They will fade almost as quickly as a snowball in an August sun.

The writer of the Psalms says "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so" (Ps. 107:2) Yet are we saying so as we should?

Suppose our loved ones never mentioned us in their conversation with others. How would you feel if your husband, wife, children or parents never revealed that you existed in their lives? Yet how often do we reveal the Christian message in our conversation with others. Christ is our Saviour, our best Friend, our greatest benefactor, yet one would sometimes just how He. feels when He is left out of so much of our conversation.

If bringing Christ and the Christian gospel into casual everyday conversation seems shocking to us, perhaps there is something wrong in our way of living. At an afternoon tea, the subject of the Lord's Supper could be appropriately injected into conversation. This might lead to a healthy sharing of what religion means to an individual. Every day we have opportunities for this arises in the regular rounds of living.

It's no problem for shady and naughty stories to float around in many of the unsavory places where people gather — even in front of the church building itself. Spicey gossip, sharp criticism, yes, but natural conversation of what Christ means to us.

This matter of communication of ideas is basic to witnessing. "Go ye therefore and witness" is the Divine order and plan. We are developing many new systems of dissemination of news. A man can now sit in front of a television and see and hear the news from the remotest part of the earth while it is happening. It would be a shame if in our "saying so" if we would be conscious of Christ and what he means to us and our world while we are in conversation with others. It was a perfectly natural thing for Deacon Phillip (Acts. 8:26-28), that traveling salesman, to join himself to the chariot of the eunuch while journeying to Gaza, and to talk with him about his Lord. This writer has known some men of this type in his ministry. They are doing what is natural for a Christian to do — communicate to others what Christ means to them.

Does your working vocabulary have in it spiritual references? Is our witness warm and powerful for Christ?

Are we embarrassed to talk about the moral and spiritual values in our conversation with our neighbors and friends? Sometimes, somethings ought to be omitted from our conversation, but surely not Christ and what He has done and is doing for us?

Give it a try — go to the church of your choice Sunday. It will help you to be a better conversationalist for the Lord.

Carver Price

Homecoming Friday At 7

The local Carver Price High School will conduct its annual home coming exercises this Saturday evening at 7 p.m. when the basketball teams, girls and boys meet the two teams from the Carter G. W. Woodson High School, of Dillwyn. This is the final game of the season between these two schools before the district tournament. During the intermission, principal W. M. Robinson will crown Miss Roberta Ferguson as Home Coming Queen. Attendants from each department of the school will be represented in the grand march. The captain of the local Panthers will be the attendant of the queen. The public is invited to be present.

An appreciative crowd attended the special program sponsored by the Junior Choir of the Gilflee Baptist Church last Sunday evening at 7:30. The guest speaker was Rev. Raymond Turner, of Spout Spring, a student at Virginia Seminary and College. The devotionals were conducted by the pastor of the church and the Rev. J. W. Paige. Words of welcome were given by Mrs. Dorothy Stevens, director of the local Gallilee Jr. Choir. The offering was taken by Deacons J. W. King, Virgil Fleshman and L. A. Ewing. A total of $25.25 was reported. Special music was rendered by the Mount Airy Jr. Choir under the direction of Al Walker Johnson.

The annual Men's Day program will be observed at the Zion Baptist Church this Sunday

FFA Seeks To Serve Community

Each year the Appomattox Chapter of the Future Farmers of America includes in its annual Program of Work objectives which promote services to the community.

The chapter this year has collected and distributed three baskets of food to needy families, constructed 3 seesaws for the Oakville Elementary School, participated in the Farmville Pair and Lynchburg Farm Show. Also, all our Chapter has received training in preventing forest fires. Thirty - six members of our chapter make up a special emergency crew for fighting forest fires.

Other plans for community services this year are: have 30 members to put up FFA mail box posts, have all members keep home lawns and shubbery trimmed, and urge parents to improve the appearance of homes.

The community service committee is made of: Gene Pollard, Chairman; Richard Jones, and Marvin Harris.

Home Burns In Sunday Fire

The home of Charlie Love, Negro, on Rt. 644, two miles south of Appomattox, burned to the ground early Sunday morning.

Firemen from the County Volunteer Fire Department answered the call about 3:30 a.m. Sunday. Fire Chief Ned Hancock said that the home could have might have been saved if firemen had had more water. They were forced to use 500 gallon barrel on the fire, and then had to return to town for more water.

Love and neighbors were able to salvage only a small chest and a kitchen chair. He estimated his loss at around $10,000, partially covered by insurance.

Firemen kept watch from spreading to a nearby automobile, chicken coop, and other small buildings.

Love plans to rebuild on the site, an onlooker reported.
